Protecting Mother and Children

Influenza (Flu) and whooping cough can be deadly, especially in a baby’s first few months of life. Vaccinating women against these diseases during each pregnancy helps protect both them and their babies. Studies show influenza and whooping cough vaccines are very safe for the expecting women and developing babies. Pregnant women pass antibodies to their unborn babies.

PROBLEM

Babies not receiving early protection:

- Not enough women are receiving the Flu and Tdap vaccines during the third trimester for each pregnancy.
- Pregnant women aren’t always aware of the need for these recommended vaccines.
- Babies under 6 months old are at the highest risk for being hospitalized with influenza.

WHAT CAN BE DONE?

Everyone Can:

- Pregnant women can get the recommended Influenza and Tdap vaccines and talk to their healthcare providers if they have any questions, to learn more: www.cdc.gov/pregnancyvaccines
- All others can get a Flu shot every year and be up to date on vaccines, learn more: www.cdc.gov/vaccinesFAQs
