P.1.a.(2) The mission statement is a work in progress. The values are informally discussed as issues arise. Employees are aware of all these concepts, but they are not yet part of the culture. Currently, Kent is process controlled and not result oriented. With that being said, this is the mission statement we currently have posted on our website:

Vision Statement: The City of Kent is a sustainable place that has intertwined the delicate balance of economic, environmental and social vitality that form a community. Together we have created a plan based on our appreciation of a small-town lifestyle placed within the urban context of northern Ohio. Our focus on locally owned and independent businesses within the downtown area and diverse neighborhoods throughout the city provides a viable choice that preserves natural resources and the historic nature of our built environment.

We are a university community where Kent State University serves as a resource to create and support enterprises with a strong social and environmental consciousness while providing cultural opportunities for our residents. Kent is a diverse community where the integrity of neighborhoods has been protected by a balance between family homes and student housing.

The size of our community allows us to create a “walkable” community within a built environment where traffic management is possible because of the strong use of alternative forms of transportation and well-planned traffic patterns. We also are a place where the park system and community celebrations enhance our physical and mental well-being while raising our individual awareness and commitment to enhancement of the natural resources that bless this place. The strong academic tradition of our public school system prepares our youth to develop their abilities and participate in creating the future of this community.

Finally, we are assured that we will remain a sustainable community because of committed Kent residents, approachable city officials and cooperation between local government and university officials who truly have incorporated sustainable practices into the core of decision-making.

Core Organizational Values:
- That the strength of this organization is its people;
- That elected and appointed officials, the administration, and City employees are all team members of this organization;
- That all employees are valuable;
• That services be provided in the highest professional, efficient and ethical manner by establishing and maintaining high standards of performance for excellence;
• To respect all departments, employees and citizens as being diverse but equally important;
• That the spirit of community trust and respect should guide every decision and action;
• To consider this community trust as an honor, a responsibility, and a privilege;
• That the achievement of long term goals transcends short term benefits or inconveniences;
• To encourage change and innovation that improves Kent as a place to live;
• To recognize the City Council’s responsibility to make informed policy decisions for the community, with insight and integrity;
• That administrative decisions are made based on the greater benefit of the organization rather than individual departments or divisions;
• That the greater good of the whole community may outweigh the needs of individuals;
• To concentrate on the select core municipal services and evaluate new services before they are offered, to determine if they represent an appropriate role for city government;
• That improving the organization leads to improved and more efficient municipal services;
• To be patient, polite and courteous to citizens regardless of circumstances;
• To be responsive to residents either by accomplishment, explanation, or information;
• To work more on non-urgent important matters rather than unimportant urgent matters;
• To engage in community building by investing resources today for a better future;
• That the City has been commissioned to lead this community with a vision and a strategic plan while simultaneously demonstrating fiscal responsibility;
• To appreciate the community’s sense of place, including its environmental and historic resources by employing sustainable development principles;
• That the community’s relationships with all of its educational institutions are extremely vital.

P.1.a.(3) At present, employee profile information is available through the Human Resources Department, but it has not been compiled in the manner asked for. Great ideas without great people are irrelevant. Visions and plans don’t implement themselves, people do. People who choose to serve and make personal sacrifices for the “greater good” that we call community and Kent residents call home.

Taking on these responsibilities was a choice made by every city employee. They believe that one person can make a difference in the lives of many, that each of them has important jobs to do that are essential to the community, and that they matter. These are the people that work hard for you, me and everyone in Kent 365 days a year. They are everyday heroes. You may not know their faces, but you know their work; it’s that place we call Kent.

P.1.a.(4) Technology: The City of Kent utilizes technology to enhance and aid in communications, employee productivity, and the overall efficiency and effectiveness of its offered services.

Each member serves a four year term. All of the City of Kent’s administrative powers are the responsibility of the Council.

The Council is headed by the Mayor and is also the President of the Council. The Mayor is an elected official who serves a four year term. His responsibilities include presiding over all Council meetings, is a member ex-officio of all Council created committees. The Mayor has no administrative duties and only votes in the Council in the case of a tie.

The City Manager is appointed by the Council via a majority vote for an indefinite term. The City Manager is the City of Kent’s chief administrative officer. It is the City Manager’s responsibility to coordinate the daily management of the City and report to the Council. P.1.b.(3) The City of Kent can operate effectively and efficiently only if our suppliers and partners are involved; therefore, they are a critical and essential component for our success. Our partners understand this and are thus committed to providing timely and relevant services. We rely on our partners to assist us in the value creation process because they are directly involved with our citizens and stakeholders. We also depend on them to assist us in problem solving ventures.

P.1.b.(4) Key supplier and customer, client, and citizen partnering relationships are same as they are in a regular business firm, except that the City does not make a profit. We concentrate on serving the needs and services for the residents. Communication mechanisms include the Internet, mail, memos, legal advertising, direct mailings, and direct person to person contact. Local traffic and emergency notifications are also made through local AM radio stations.

P.2 Organization Challenges

P.2.a.(1) The City of Kent is a regional retail, educational, industrial, and employment center of the State of Ohio. The City’s population is 27,906, with a total house holds of 10,435. The eclectic music, arts, natural beauty, historic downtown, Kent State University, and an international business presence are a hallmark of the Kent community with all the unique pieces fitting together like a puzzle, providing superior city services to its residents and businesses especially in the areas of policing, fire suppression, emergency medical response, street repair and maintenance, parks and open space side walks and open government. All of this has lead to recognition of Kent as a model community in Ohio for its superior quality of life.

Kent maintains a competitive advantage in financial stability, capital and facility planning, and senior leadership is future focused, quality, and results oriented.

P.2.a.(2) Competitive success factors for the City include: organizational performance, strong working relationship with citizen volunteers, strong financial position, long-range capital planning and strong strategic planning, water management and sewage services, tax administration. Our success factors include: maintaining relations with police, fire, and trade associations and distributing our limited resources to all branches equally without concentrating on just one area.

Key changes that affect our organization include providing services driven by finance and trying to be more strategic. Also, the current brain loss from northeastern Ohio region to other parts of the country is one of the KEY changes of the organization.

P.2.a.(3) Competitive data from within the industry include financial benchmarking, customer surveys, neighboring cities, and trade and professional associations.

Sources of competitive data outside of government communities include staff/personal contacts, and local/regional websites.

P.2.b. The City has to deal with several strategic challenges:

Health Care: The laws state and federal laws have been changing, so we must keep up with these changes. In addition, the prices for these services continue to increase, so we must balance the needs of our employees against the rising costs.

Limited resources: Both the State and the federal government have been reducing City funding over the years while customer expectations have been increasing; consequently, we must do more with less. This has led us to adopt many Quality Practices which are unfamiliar to many of our employees and customers. As such, we are educating and training them in these areas while trying to put these practices into use.

Organization changes: We are trying to focus on being a business. Therefore, we are beginning to list our goals and track our results. Our goal is to deliver maximum results with a minimum cost.

P.2.c. We have recently begun to focus on evaluating our performance improvements. We have always had every department compile monthly reports detailing performance and progress, but these reports have never been compiled into usable organizational tool. We are in process of reviewing and compiling these documents. In addition, we are currently developing a "scorecard" which lists key processes for the City. Upon completion, this will be a valuable tool for the evaluation and improvement of these processes. We also have a yearly budget review and planning report that informally addresses performance improvements.

Employee training is provided as required. Training needs are determined by Departmental Leaders as well as the Human Resources Department. Organizational learning also occurs on an informal basis via employee and departmental interaction as well as through interaction with our customers and partners. We are in process of moving toward a Team environment which will assist us with organizational learning.
